65
Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Lexington, (Kentucky,) to his friend in this City, dated October 20, 1790.

" I left Charleston the Thirteenth of February, for the purpose of planting a numerous colony, now about to move on, to the South Carolina Yazou Company's Territory, adjacent to the Natchez, and on the Mississippi river. This territory is bounded by that famous river on the West: by Coal's creek, which falls into the same river, and a line to be extended due east from the main spring or fountain head of said creek to the Mobile or Tombegbee river, on the South -- by the aforesaid Mobile or Tombegbee, until it reaches northward by the latitudinal point of 33 degrees, on the east -- thence on the north running due West along the parallel line of that same latitude until it intersects the Mississippi.

" The country from this last river to the Tombegbee, is about 224 miles, and above 80 from the mouth of Coal's creek to the 33<sup>d</sup> degree of northern latitude, and is confessedly the very garden of America.

" The soil is superior to the very best in Kentucky; the climate salubrious, and far more temperate, and cool, than that of the same latitude is, on the Atlantic; and the whole face of this extensive country is well watered, abounding in fine springs -- the woods replenished with game, and the rivers, creeks and brooks, with fish of all kinds. The whole territory is well timbered and without a single mountain, although the land is uneven and sloping. It abounds with walnut, cedar, white and red oak, ash, elm, maple, sycamore, sugar maple and mulberry trees, and is interspersed with natural meadows or savannahs, knee deep in clover and timothy, and with cane brakes, whose reeds are from thirty to forty feet high, and as thick at the roots as any muscular man's arm. It is, therefore, the finest country on earth for horned cattle, horses, sheep and hogs, and deemed the very best for corn, tobacco, indigo, cotton, hemp, and flax. A plant of tobacco, when cured of the growth of that country, will weigh a pound; and the land produce from 100 to 135 bushels of corn per acre on an average. The midlands between the Mississippi and Tombegbee are excellent for small grain. These lands abound with pitch pine trees, although no pine barren. Its staples will therefore be staves, heading, lumber, tobacco, cotton, corn, indigo, silk, naval stores, provisions of salted flesh and fish, coarse linens, cordage sail duck, Indian meal and flour. Its soil fifty miles east the Mississippi, is a deep soapy loam, mixed with a little sand, and much clay -- as black as a man's hat -- and without a stone or even a pebble. It is intersected by various navigable rivers; and from the bay of Mobile, the tide water runs up into the grant along the Mobile or Tombegbee river twenty five miles. Any merchant ship or frigate can by this river or the Mississippi, pass from the Mexican gulf into the company's territory, and anchor before the towns the Agent General is now establishing on these rivers -- the one on the latter, on what is called the Walnut Hills, near to the mouth of the Yazou, the other on the former at its confluence with the White Fluff river. This country is accessible to and from the sea by other navigable rivers, but of lesser note which pervade it -- such as Pearl river and those of the Pascagoula, the Hatcha, the Hoshap Hatcha, the Athita, &c. -- and it is transversely cut by other rivers navigable to sloops and schooners for many hundred miles, viz the White Fluff and Noxbury rivers, which fall into the Tombegbee and the Yazou, the Big Black, the Biapia and Coal's creek, the great streams which empty themselves into the Mississippi. In this country the company owns upwards of one million of acres along the Mississippi, above the Yazou, and more than half a million on the Tombegbee, of prime lands, fit for Rice. These lands are a considerable object with the South Carolina and Georgia planters of opulence.

" For this country, the company obtained not only the state right, under a legislative act and patent but that also of the Choctaws, under another state act of Georgia -- and generously paid for both. To strengthen these rights still further, and put Civil out of the way, the company has acted under these grants; for they have taken peaceful possession of the ground with one hundred families, sent down last June, by the Agent General, by whose exertions the Spaniards and Indians, are very fully reconciled to the settlement, and they have by this agency sent down with the first embarkation, goods to the amount of ten thousand pounds sterling, for the Indian trade and accommodation of the colony.

" The Agent General sets off immediately from the Ohio Falls for the new settlement accompanied with a regularly organized battalion of cavalry, artillery, and infantry riflemen. -- These have been recruited within the space of a month. Gen. Scott of Kentucky is to take five hundred families with him. His son is a lieutenant of horse in the battalion. This corps is a merely defensive and protectionary one to guard the labouring colonists and emigrants.

" Gen. Wilkinson will follow him down with 1000 fighting men by Christmas, with their families, and Gen. Xavier will take down a similar number. Gen. M'Dowall accompanies the Franklins from the Long Island, where they are to embark with 300 from the back parts of North Carolina, and 200 with Capt. Alston from Cumberland. The company are also about sending great numbers from McGillivray's country (who is one of the proprietors) from South Carolina and Georgia. In short, I do not exaggerate when I tell you that in all human probability this will in five years be the most flourishing settlement for the time ever formed."

MONDAY, December 13.

SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

THIS day at 12 o'clock, the senate proceeded from their chamber of Congress to the house of the President of the United States, where the following address, in answer to the President's speech to both houses, was delivered by the president of the senate.

To the President of the United States of America.

We receive, sir, with particular satisfaction, the communications contained in your speech, which confirm to us the progressive state of the public credit, and afford, at the time, a new proof of the solidity of the foundation on which it rests; and we cheerfully join in the acknowledgment which is due to the probity and patriotism of the mercantile and marine part of our fellow citizens, whose enlightened attachment to the principles of good government, is not less conspicuous in this, than it has been in other important respects.

In confidence that every constitutional preliminary has been observed, we assure you of our disposition to concur, in giving the requisite sanction, to the admission of Kentucky as a distinct member of the Union; in doing which, we shall anticipate the happy effects to be expected from the sentiments of attachment towards the Union; and its present government, which have been expressed by the patriotic inhabitants of that district.

While we regret, that the continuance, and increase of the hostilities and depredations which have distressed our north western frontiers, should have rendered offensive measures necessary, we feel an entire confidence in the sufficiency of the insinuations which have produced them, and in the wisdom of the dispositions which have been concerted, in pursuance of the powers vested in you; and whatever may have been the event, we shall cheerfully concur in the provisions which the expedition that has been undertaken may require on the part of the legislature, and in any other, which the future peace and safety of our frontier settlements may call for.

The critical posture of the European powers will engage a due portion of our attention, and we shall be ready to adopt any measures which a prudent circumspection may suggest, for the preservation of the blessings of peace: the navigation, and the fisheries of the United States, are objects too interesting, not to inspire a disposition to promote them, by all the means which shall appear to us consistent with their natural progress and permanent prosperity.

Impressed with the importance of a free intercourse with the Mediterranean, we shall not think any deliberations misemployed, which may conduce to the adoption of proper measures for removing the impediments that obstruct it.

The improvement of the judiciary system, and the other important objects, to which you have pointed our attention, will not fail to engage the consideration they respectively merit.

In the course of our deliberations, upon every subject, we shall rely upon the co-operation which an undiminished zeal, and incessant anxiety for the public welfare on your part, so thoroughly ensure; and as it is our anxious desire, so it shall be our constant endeavor, to render the established government more and more instrumental in promoting the good of our fellow citizens, and more and more the object of their attachment and confidence.

To this address the President was pleased to reply.

Gentlemen,

THESE assurances of favorable attention to the subjects I have recommended, and of entire confidence in my views, make the impression on me which I ought to feel, I thank you for them both, and shall continue to rely much for the success of all our measures for the public good, on the aid they will receive from the wisdom and integrity of your councils.

G. WASHINGTON.
